LINCOLN UNIVERSITY

transforming the future one learner at a time

through enduring understanding engaging pedagogy, and evolving worldview

M.Ed. in School Administration and Supervision

- affordability

  (thousands less for a degree than other institutions)

- NCATE accredited programs

  (only institution in the area, your degree is accepted nationwide)

- most classes offered online

  (can accommodate your family and work schedule)

- taught by experienced faculty

  (practical educational experience taught by doctorate level faculty)

- flexible scheduling to meet your needs

  (not a cohort, so can adjust your academic schedule for unexpected life events)

The program for School Administration and Supervision prepares individuals to serve as educational leaders at the building level. Students can choose to focus on the Elementary School, the Secondary School, the K-12 Educational Program, or Special Education.

Recognizing that candidates come from an educational setting, the program provides a strong foundation of knowledge so that students can build on the real world experience that they are immersed in to develop leadership skills that will allow them to be successful in any educational assignment

M.Ed. in School Administration and Supervision is a "hybrid" program with most classes offered in an online format that allows students to complete requirements in a location and at a time of their own choosing. A few classes, because of the material that needs to be covered, are still offered in a traditional class setting.
