Executive Summary
Lincoln University Graduating Student Survey (GSS) Data Analysis
for Academic Years 2008-2012

Introduction:

The Lincoln University Graduating Student Survey (GSS), a locally developed, 40-item survey, is designed to provide student feedback regarding the quality of educational programs, services, and overall student experience at Lincoln University. The survey is divided into four sections. Section 1 (survey items 1-10) collects background and demographic information. Section 2 (survey items 11-20) asks students to rate the degree to which their college education has contributed to their knowledge, skills, and/or personal development in several areas using the following scale: A=Very Much; B=Somewhat; C=Very Little; and D=Not At All. Section 3 (survey items 21-37) asks students to rate their satisfaction with various aspects of their LU education using the following scale: A=Very Satisfied; B=Satisfied; C=Dissatisfied and D=Very Dissatisfied. Section 4 (survey items 38-40) asks students to answer general questions regarding their attendance at LU. To maximize response rate, the survey is administered to students in conjunction with the Major Field Test during Assessment Week in the fall and spring semesters. The Education Department, Nursing Department, and the Office of Graduate Studies also assist with administering the GSS to their respective graduates, thus, students completing the survey are primarily graduating students.

The Lincoln University Graduating Student Survey (GSS) Data Analysis, prepared by the Office of Institutional Research and Assessment (OIRA) provides information regarding the students that have completed the GSS during academic years 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011 and 2012. All information used to complete this analysis was obtained from the GSS database that is maintained by the OIRA.

Methodology:

This analysis is focused on the responses of 1,429 students that completed the GSS during academic years 2008 (287 students), 2009 (293 students), 2010 (286 students), 2011 (286 students) and 2012 (277 students). In order to provide Lincoln University with the most useful information, data in the GSS database is analyzed using two different methods: Method 1: Comparison of Percentages; Method 2: Comparison of Means.

Method 1: Comparison of Percentages

For the purpose of this analysis, a five-year average is computed for survey items 11-20 (contribution items). The five-year average of students responding very much/somewhat is then compared to the five-year average of students responding very little/not at all to determine levels of contribution. Survey items contribute the most to students education if the percentage responding very much/somewhat is equal to or greater than 85% and the percentage responding very little/not at all is less than 15%. Survey items contribute the least to students education if the percentage responding very much/somewhat is less than 85% and the percentage responding very little/not at all is equal to or greater than 15%. The percentage of students not responding to survey items 11-20 are excluded from this analysis.

Five-year averages are also computed for survey items 21-37 (satisfaction items). The five-year average of students responding very satisfied/satisfied is then compared to the five-year average of students responding dissatisfied/very dissatisfied to determine levels of student satisfaction. Students are most satisfied with survey items if the percentage responding very satisfied/satisfied is equal to or greater than 80% and the percentage of students responding dissatisfied/very dissatisfied is less than 20%. Students are least satisfied with survey items if the percentage responding very satisfied/satisfied is less than 80% and the percentage responding dissatisfied/very dissatisfied is equal to or greater than 20%. The percentage of students not responding to survey items 21-37 are excluded from this analysis. Section 1-A reports the summary of this analysis. In Section 1-B results are broken down by individual survey items and are displayed graphically. See Appendix 1 for computation of 5-year averages.

Lincoln University Graduating Student Survey (GSS) Data Analysis
for Academic Years 2008-2012

Method 2: Comparison of Means

For the purpose of this analysis, the survey scale is changed to a 4-point Likert-scale. For questions 11-20, Survey scale A=Very Much is changed to 4; Survey scale B=Somewhat is changed to 3; Survey scale C=Very Little is changed to 2 and Survey Scale D=Not At All is changed to 1. For questions 21-37, Survey scale A=Very Satisfied is changed to 4; Survey Scale B=Satisfied is changed to 3; Survey scale C=Dissatisfied is changed to 2 and Survey scale D=Very Dissatisfied is changed to 1. A five-year average is computed for survey items 11-20 and the items are ranked by their means (highest to lowest). Survey items with the highest means contribute the most to students education and survey items with the lowest means contribute the least to students education. A five-year average is also computed for survey items 21-37 and the items are ranked by their means (highest to lowest). Students are most satisfied with survey items with the highest means and are least satisfied with survey items with the lowest means. Section 2-A reports the summary of this analysis. In Section 2-B results are broken down by individual survey items and are displayed graphically. See Appendix 2 for computation of 5-year averages and ranking of survey items by means.

Findings:

Contribution Items

Analysis of the contribution items (survey items 11-20) reveals that GSS respondents believe their LU education has contributed the most to their ability to write clearly and logically; ability to work with others in a group; ability to work with people from diverse backgrounds; openness to new ideas and practices; ability to give oral presentations; leadership skills; tolerance of people with different beliefs; and understanding and appreciation of other cultures. See Tables 1 and 45. The analysis also reveals that GSS respondents believe their LU education has contributed the least to their awareness of global issues and events and ability to use computer technology. See Tables 2 and 46.

Satisfaction Items

Analysis of the satisfaction items (survey items 21-37) reveals that GSS respondents are most satisfied with their academic major; instruction in their major courses; professional competence of faculty in their major; interaction with faculty in or out of class; instruction in elective courses; overall quality of LU education; instruction in general education courses; and clarity of degree requirements. See Tables 3 and 47. The analysis also reveals that GSS respondents are least satisifed with personal safety on campus; availability of courses required for degree; sense of "belonging" at this university; preparation for the job market; and career advisement. See Tables 4 and 48.

Conclusions and Recommendations:

Analysis of the GSS data reveals a number of significant findings that are present regardless of the data analysis method employed: GSS respondents believe their education has contributed the most totheir ability to write clearly and logically; ability to work with others in a group; ability to work with people from diverse backgrounds; openness to new ideas and practices; ability to give oral presentations; leadership skills; tolerance of people with different beliefs; and understanding and appreciation of other cultures while their education has contributed the least to their awareness of global issues and events and ability to use computer technology. Also, GSS respondents are most satisfied with their academic major; instruction in their major courses; professional competence of faculty in their major; interaction with faculty in or out of class; instruction in elective courses; overall quality of LU education; instruction in general education courses; and clarity of degree requirements while they are least satisfied with personal safety on campus; availability of courses required for degree; sense of "belonging" at this university; preparation for the job market; and career advisement.

The students that complete the GSS are not a representative sample of the entire student body; therefore, the results of this analysis cannot be generalized to the entire student population. However, five years worth of survey data does provide Lincoln University with a pretty clear picture regarding the satisfaction level of our graduating students. The CAIRP recommends the continued administration of the GSS and analysis of the data to determine if future analyses will yield the same results.
