

Professor Amanda Good is an innovative educator and dedicated researcher, currently serving as an Assistant Professor at Lincoln University in Jefferson City, MO. With a rich academic background and a passion for advancing knowledge in business and management, Professor Good is committed to shaping the next generation of leaders and fostering inclusive, equitable workplaces.

Academic Positions: Professor Good's academic journey has seen her hold various teaching positions, each contributing to her holistic understanding of business education and research:

Assistant Professor, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, MO, August 2023-Present

Instructor, State Fair Community College, Sedalia, MO, July 2022-June 2023

Adjunct Professor, William Woods University, Fulton, MO, Aug 2008 – Dec 2011

Teaching and Research Interests: Professor Good's teaching and research interests reflect her dedication to understanding and improving organizational dynamics and leadership practices:

Organizational Behavior: Professor Good explores the psychological forces shaping workplace dynamics, teaching strategies to enhance organizational health and employee well-being.

Management and Leadership: With a focus on ethical leadership, Professor Good guides students in developing effective strategies for inspiring teams and driving organizational success.

Inclusion: Professor Good is passionate about creating equitable workplaces, enriching the learning experience with real-world applications for social justice.

Generational Differences in the Workplace: Fascinated by generational dynamics, Professor Good equips students with skills to bridge generational gaps and foster collaborative environments.

Conference Presentations and Research: Professor Good actively contributes to academic discourse through conference presentations and ongoing research projects, including studies on inclusive leadership and workplace social dynamics.

Professional Memberships: Professor Good is a member of esteemed professional organizations such as the Society for Human Resource Management and the Institute of Management Accountants, reflecting her commitment to excellence in business education and practice.

Service: Beyond academia, Professor Good serves her community through administrative contracts and committee leadership roles, demonstrating her dedication to making a positive impact beyond the classroom.

Professor Amanda Good's multifaceted expertise, coupled with her passion for teaching and research, makes her a valuable asset to Lincoln University and the broader academic community. Her innovative approach to education and commitment to inclusivity and social justice serve as inspiration for students and colleagues alike.