

Emir J. Phillips, an Associate Professor of Finance with a distinguished career spanning over 25 years, is a venerated academic and financial advisor renowned for his comprehensive expertise and educational background, including a Doctorate of Business Administration (DBA) from Grenoble Ecole De Management, France, alongside degrees in Law (JD) and Business Administration (MBA).

Dr. Phillips has devoted his career to enriching future business professionals with an understanding of grand strategies, critical thinking, and the foundational ethics of business. His pedagogical approach integrates these core principles across a spectrum of subjects including Corporate Finance, Microeconomics, Macroeconomics, Business Law, and Financial Management, both in traditional and hybrid formats.

Dr. Phillips' academic contributions extend beyond teaching to impactful research, with fifteen peer-reviewed journal articles to his name. His research predominantly explores the intricacies of financial analysis, the ethics of financial planning, and the broader implications of economic theories on financial practices. His work is grounded in a profound belief in the importance of ethical considerations in finance, advocating for a disciplined approach to financial planning and analysis that is reflective of his extensive professional certifications and licenses in financial planning, insurance, and tax preparation.

As the founder of Wealth Directives, Inc., Dr. Phillips leverages his academic insights to offer specialized advice in estate planning, retirement income strategies, and investment management, emphasizing the significance of informed financial decision-making. His involvement with the SCORE volunteer program, where he conducts taxation seminars for small business owners, underscores his commitment to community service and education.

Dr. Phillips' educational endeavors are supported by a robust foundation in financial and economic theory, demonstrated through his teaching roles across several prestigious institutions. His ability to translate complex financial concepts into accessible knowledge underscores his role as a pivotal figure in the landscape of financial education and advisory services.

Through his scholarly and professional pursuits, Dr. Phillips exemplifies a dedication to fostering a deeper understanding of finance that equips individuals to navigate the complexities of the financial world with confidence and ethical integrity.